Mary Loram QC has a background in economic crime cases, and has had conduct of many complex trials including financial, tax and banking fraud, and the responsibility for related matters such as document management and disclosure issues including LPP. She has experience of both prosecuting and defending, and advising on tactical issues at the earliest stages of an investigation or case. Mary is well versed in leading and directing a team of lawyers through investigation and trial. Her cases often involve restraint of assets and applications under the Proceeds of Crime Act and also money laundering regulation, and her experience extends to regulatory matters such as Consumer and Trading Standards cases and the recovery of assets under the civil jurisdiction. She has a keen interest the liability of corporations and officers for 'failure to prevent' offences arising from legislation such as the Bribery Act 2010 and Criminal Finances Act 2017. Mary also sits as a Recorder in the Crown Court.
